HIS OPINION.

In Clear Sentences an Authority adds his own to the Popular Judgment.

191 West Tenth Street, }
New York, Aug. 11, 1880. }

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson:

I am slow to pin my faith to any new curative agent. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER has won my good opinion. I find it an exceptionally cleanly plaster to use and rapid in its action. Many tests of its qualities in my own family, and among my patients, have convinced me that there is no other single article so valuable for popular use, none so helpful in cases of Lame Back, Local Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Congestion of the Bronchial Tubes and lungs and Lumbago.

You may feel free to use my name.

Very truly yours,

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Chronic Diarrhœa, Jaundice, Impurity of the Blood, Fever and Ague, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Traveling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be relieved.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator in the House!

For, whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe purgative, alterative and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE,

And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.

Simmons Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.

J. GILL SHORTER, Governor of Ala.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., says: Have derived some benefit from the use of Simmons Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only Thing that never fails to Relieve."—I have used many remedies for Dyspepsia, Liver Affection and Debility, but never have found anything to benefit me to the extent Simmons Liver Regulator has. I sent from Minnesota to Georgia for it, and would send further for such a medicine, and would advise all who are similarly affected to give it a trial as it seems the only thing that never fails to relieve.

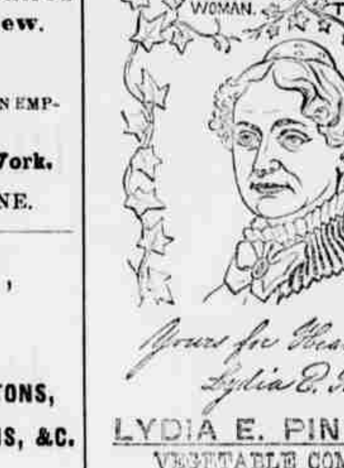

P. M. JANNEY, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

SELECT STORY.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY.

Mr. Podmore Tempany felt very much disgusted when the fair widow who had consented to share his name handed him a valuable bracelet in order that he might get a valuable stone replaced. He was an elderly bachelor of miserly proclivities, and did not half relish the commission, though he could not very well refuse. It had been the aim of his life to marry a wife with a fortune, and as Mrs. Bramwell Jay possessed this desirable qualification, he was naturally anxious to avoid offending her.

He therefore reluctantly took the bracelet to Mr. Bevis, the jeweler in Sackville street, but finding the cost of replacing the missing stone would be considerable, he could not summon up courage to give the order. He locked the bracelet up at his lodgings, and fretted a good deal about the unnecessary expense the widow had put him to. By degrees, however, he became calmer, for it happened that Mrs. Bramwell Jay omitted to make any inquiry about her property. As time slipped by he began to hope that the lady had actually forgotten all about it—which, indeed, seemed to be the case. Naturally Mr. Tempany did not feel called upon to refresh her memory, and thus it came about that the bracelet remained in his possession until the day fixed for the wedding was close at hand.

Just at this inconvenient time a friend of Mr. Tempany's—to whom he was under obligations in the way of business—must needs get married, and Mr. Tempany felt compelled to give him a wedding present. He regreted this disagreeable necessity very much, because he had suffered a great deal of uneasiness of late owing to the increase in his expenditure incident to his engagement. He was also at the moment particularly depressed by the prospect of having to pay for a honeymoon trip to the Italian lakes, not to mention such comparatively trifling items as an outfit for himself, and promiscuous gratuities to every one on his wedding day. Even the consoling reflection that once married, his wife's income would be amply sufficient for both failed to soothe him, and in this unhappy frame of mind he suddenly recollected Mrs Jay's bracelet. Since he absolutely must give a wedding present to his friend Bullivant, why should he not make use of the bracelet? It was a great temptation, for the ornament had lain in his drawer several weeks, and Mrs. Bramwell Jay had apparently forgotten it. If she should happen to ask for it before their marriage he could invent some plausible excuse to account for the delay in returning it. When they were married he could pretend he had lost it, or that it had been stolen, and, if driven into a corner, he could replace it by an inferior article. As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Tempany did not pause to reflect upon remote contingencies, for he felt so inexpressibly relieved at the prospect of avoiding further expense at the moment that he yielded blindly to an overpowering temptation. As to the morality of the transaction, it can only be charitably supposed that he vaguely imagined he had some sort of legal property in the bracelet in anticipation of his rights as a husband.

However this may be, Mr. Tempany dispatched the bracelet to his friends with a neatly worded letter of congratulation and good wishes. The fact of one of the stones being missing was a little awkward, because it showed that the bracelet was not new. But Mr. Tempany flattered himself that he had got over the difficulty very adroitly by remarking that the bracelet had been a cherished heirloom in his family for years, and that he would never have parted with it to any one but the wife of his dear and esteemed friend Bullivant. By return of post he received a hearty letter of thanks from the lady, and also from his friend, and Mr. Tempany experienced a thrill of virtuous satisfaction at having, for once in his life, gained credit for generosity.

Of course he did not mention this little episode to Mrs. Bramwell Jay, and he mentally resolved never to introduce Bullivant to her. But a few days afterwards he was considerably startled by the widow saying:

"By-the-by, Podmore, a friend of mine writes that she had such a nice letter from you. Amy Markham and I were old schoolfellows. You never told me you knew her."

"I never heard the name," said Mr. Tempany, uneasily.

"How stupid of me! That was her maiden name, of course," exclaimed Mrs. Bramwell Jay, taking a letter from her desk. "It appears that she has recently been married. Her husband is Mr.—Mr.—such a queer name, and I can't read her signature! But he is a friend of yours."

"Not Bullivant!" said Mr. Tempany, with a start.

"Yes. She writes that her husband is an old friend of yours, and that you sent her a beautiful gold bracelet. How good of you, Podmore! But you never gave me a beautiful bracelet," added the widow, reproachfully.

"All in the way of business!" muttered Mr. Tempany, feeling faint.

"Amy says she will be passing through town to-morrow and will make a point of calling to show me the bracelet," continued Mrs. Bramwell Jay, innocently. "She says it is extremely handsome, and she wants to read me your kind letter. Are you ill, Podmore?"

"No, no. It is the heat of the fire," gasped Mr. Tempany, wiping his forehead. "I wanted you to come somewhere with me to-morrow, Theodosia—for the whole day, I mean. I haven't been to the Crystal Palace for years, or to Greenwich Park. Will you come to Greenwich Park, Theodosia?" he added, desperately.

"What horribly vulgar places! How absurd you are, Podmore!" exclaimed the widow, looking at him rather curiously. "Besides, I want to see Amy when she calls. I shall certainly stay in for her to morrow."

"I shouldn't, if I were you," said Mr. Tempany, earnestly. "Very inconsiderate of her, I call it, to swoop down upon you like that."

"I don't think so," returned Mrs. Bramwell Jay. "I want particularly to see the bracelet you sent her. Will you come and meet her, Podmore?"

"No, no, thank you. Certainly not," replied the unhappy man, seizing his hat. "I mean that I shall be busy all to-morrow—particularly busy. Another time I shall be delighted."

"I suppose you and Amy have never met?" remarked the widow with a suspicious glance.

"Never! No, never! I assure you," answered Mr. Tempany, and, being anxious to avoid further questions, he beat a hasty retreat.

His state of agitation and nervous apprehension may be easily imagined, for it seemed inevitable that the deception he had practiced would be exposed. The widow could not fail to recognize her own bracelet, and would, of course, call on him for an explanation. The situation was embarrassing, to say the least, and might lead to awkward consequences. Mrs. Bramwell Jay, in her natural disgust and indignation, would in all probability break off the engagement on the spot, and the story would be known all over London. Mr. Tempany got no sleep that night, and became more and more uneasy every moment. It suddenly occurred to him, in the midst of his mental perturbation, that he had committed an act of felony punishable by law. It was an awful reflection, and caused Mr. Tempany to break into a cold perspiration. The disagreeable contingency—however remote—of finding himself in the dock, had the effect of spurring his imaginative powers, so that, inspired by sheer desperation, he at length concocted a story which he hoped might serve his purpose. The consequence was, that when, in the course of the next day, he received a peremptory note from the widow, requesting him to come and call upon her immediately, he was able to keep the appointment with an outward appearance of calm.

"Mr. Tempany, this is most extraordinary!" said Mrs. Bramwell Jay, after a very cold greeting. "Amy has been here this morning, and I find that the bracelet you presented to her is mine! I gave it to you to take to the jeweler's."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Mr. Tempany, with a well-feigned start of surprise. "It is impossible!"

"Impossible! Why, here it is," said the widow, producing the ornament. "There can be no mistake about it. I will swear to it. Of course Amy returned it to me, and I have lost no time in asking you for an explanation."

"What an odd circumstance—quite ludicrous! I must speak to Bevis. He evidently gave me back your bracelet in mistake for the one I had bought," said Mr. Tempany, speaking quickly and nervously.

"Who is Bevis?" inquired Mrs. Bramwell Jay. "Do you mean the jeweler in Sackville street?"

"Yes. I never opened the case after he handed it to me across the counter, but sent it direct to Mrs. Bullivant," explained Mr. Tempany, gaining confidence. "I recollect it was the same day that I left your bracelet to be repaired It is clear how the mistake arose."

"Still it seems extraordinary!" repeated the widow, evidently only half convinced. "The jeweler must be a very careless man, and deserves a good scolding. Suppose we go at once and ask him what he meant by it? The carriage is at the door, and I am dressed for my drive, as you see."

"Pray don't trouble, Theodosia. I—I really think you had better stay at home on a cold day like this," cried Mr. Tempany, with fearful eagerness. "I will call on Bevis at once—this instant—but there is no occasion for you to go."

"Oh, I should like to go, and shall enjoy the man's confusion," returned the lady, rather sharply. "Besides, I am curious to see the bracelet you have chosen for dear Amy."

Mr. Tempany was so utterly taken aback by this sudden and unexpected whim of Mrs. Bramwell Jay's that he could not find another word to say. He followed the lady meekly to her carriage and took his seat beside her, feeling like a criminal being led to execution. This ill-timed visit to the jeweler's must, he felt, inevitably complete his discomfiture, for Mr. Bevis would naturally deny all knowledge of the bracelet. It really seemed the only course open to him was to confess everything on the spot to avoid needless exposure and disgrace. But Mr. Tempany could not bring himself to acknowledge his deceit unless he were absolutely obliged, and during the drive he resolved as a last chance to hurry into the shop alone, on pretense of inquiring if Mr. Bevis were within, and take the opportunity to whisper a word of warning in his ear. No doubt the jeweler was open to a bribe, and would make no difficulty about screening him. In his desperate state Mr. Tempany took heart at this idea, and even tried to converse with the widow with apparent equanimity.

But alas! his little scheme was frustrated by the accidental circumstance of the coachman taking a wrong turning, so that when the carriage stopped, the side on which the widow sat was nearest to the pavement. The footman, too, was unfortunately a very smart youth, and descended from the box with such alacrity that the carriage door was open before Mr. Tempany had recovered his surprise at having reached the jeweller's. The consequence was that the widow alighted first and stepped into the shop, while Mr. Tempany, feeling that the fates were against him, and that he was pursued by a relentless Nemesis, followed after her in a state of despair.

"Mr. Bevis, how came you to make such an extraordinary mistake? You are Mr. Bevis, I presume?" said the widow, approaching the counter.

"Yes, madam," said the jeweller, quietly. "Will you be seated? What mistake?"

Mrs. Bramwell Jay explained with fatal precision, while Mr. Tempany stood by bursting with desperate eagerness to put in a warning word. By sheer force of will and mesmeric influence he succeeded in catching Mr. Bevis' eye during the recital. Now, Mr. Bevis, the jeweller, was a shrewd little man, and a glance at the agonized expression on Mr. Tempany's eager and bloodless face sufficed to put him on the alert. He knew the unhappy gentleman by sight, and also by reputation, and, though their transactions had been extremely limited in extent, he had pretty well fathomed his character. He therefore guessed at once how the land lay and what was required of him, and, though he made a sign, a ghost of a smile flickered for an instant about the corners of his mouth when the widow had finished and awaited his reply.

"I am extremely sorry, madame," he answered, with calm deliberation.

"It—it was very careless," Mr. Tempany was emboldened to say, though his heart was beating fiercely.

"Very," said the widow, emphatically, manifestly taken aback. "I cannot imagine how you could have done such a thing."

"Mistakes will sometimes happen in the best regulated establishments," said Mr. Bevis, with humility, while Mr. Tempany felt a strong desire to evince his gratitude by falling on his neck.

"Where is that bracelet this gentleman purchased then?" inquired the widow, still in an incredulous tone.

For an instant Mr. Tempany's uneasiness revived, but Mr. Bevis was quite equal to the emergency. Without a moment's hesitation he turned round and produced from a drawer behind him a case which he had laid upon the counter. Mr. Tempany was so overwhelmed with a blessed feeling of relief that he felt no curiosity as to the contents of the case. His attention was attracted to it by a startled exclamation from Mrs. Bramwell Jay:

"Oh! Podmore. What a splendid bracelet! Why, it is ablaze of diamonds!" she cried, clasping her hands.

"Eh!" exclaimed Mr. Tempany, hastily putting on his glasses with a startled air. "What! Good heavens! That isn't the bracelet that I—chose," he added, seeing at a glance that it must be worth several hundred pounds.

"Yes, it is, sir," returned Mr. Bevis, in a very quiet, decisive tone.

"Oh! No. I—I think not, at least," gasped Mr. Tempany, but observing the shrewd look on Mr. Bevis' face, which said as plainly as possible that the bracelet was the price of the service he had rendered, Mr. Tempany subsided into a frightened and uneasy silence.

"Oh! Podmore. This is really too good for Amy. Much more than is necessary, I'm sure," said the widow, who had been gazing, enraptured, at the ornament.

"Yes, Theodosia, so I think," acquiesced Mr. Tempany eagerly. "It is too rich. I'm sure she would like something quite plain better. A gold band or a simple bangle would be much more suitable. I think I will change it"

"No, Podmore. I have an idea. Amy was delighted with my bracelet, and she shall have it. I will keep this one instead of my own as a present from you," said the widow in a tone of decision. "It will be the first really handsome present you have given me, you know."

"I'm sure you don't want it, Theodosia," said Mr. Tempany with a kind of groan. "It—it doesn't suit your complexion, I'm afraid."

"You think not? Look, Mr. Bevis. What do you say?" exclaimed the widow, clasping the bracelet on her shapely arm.

"Excellent!" cried Mr. Bevis in a tone of emphatic admiration, for which Mr. Tempany hated him on the spot. "Nothing could look handsomer."

"Very well. Then that is settled," said Mrs. Bramwell Jay, pleasantly. "I'm sure Amy will be glad to get my bracelet back again."

"You will have the stone replaced, of course, sir?" said Mr. Bevis in a business-like tone, as he took up the discarded ornament.

"Oh! certainly," interposed the widow, before Mr. Tempany could utter a remark "In fact, I think the setting should be renewed altogether. It is too old-fashioned."

"I will make a good job of it," replied Mr. Bevis, putting the case on one side. "Good day, madam. Good day to you, sir."

Mr. Tempany went out of the shop without uttering another word, being quite speechless with mingled emotion. His horror at the probable amount of the jeweler's bill was only equaled by the maddening feeling of helplessness which kept him from remonstrating. So far from experiencing satisfaction at his escape he was now inclined to think it had cost him too dear, and his sentiments towards Mr. Bevis had changed to deep resentment. He excused himself from accompanying the widow for the remainder of her drive, feeling that he must be alone to brood over his crushing misfortunes. The lady seemed neither surprised or hurt at this sudden desertion, and Mr. Tempany had an uncomfortable suspicion that she rather enjoyed his discomfiture. She was charmingly affable, however, and overwhelmed him with expressions of gratitude for his handsome present when he showed her into her carriage.

"By-the-by, Podmore, dear," she exclaimed, putting her head out of the window as she drove off, "what could have induced you to say in your letter to Amy that this lovely bracelet was an heir loom in your family?"

This significant speech rankled a good deal in Mr. Tempany's mind when he had sufficiently recovered from his state of horrified bewilderment to think it over. It really sounded as if the widow suspected that she had been imposed upon, though she had not scrupled to turn the circumstances to account. It may have been owing to a guilty conscience, but Mr. Tempany certainly fancied from that day forward the widow began to manifest decided coolness toward him. So apparent had this become to him that if he had any self-respect he would have terminated the engagement. However, as Mr. Tempany regarded his marriage, as we know, from a very material point of view, he was not inclined to be very easily affronted.

At the last moment, however, an unexpected obstacle occurred. The widow's solicitor intervened with some very nasty suggestions about a marriage settlement. This did not suit Mr. Tempany's views at all, and being unable to come to terms with the lawyer, he appealed somewhat indignantly to the lady herself. Mrs Bramwell Jay refused to interfere, saying that she was entirely in the hands of her legal adviser, and the upshot was that, finding the widow's fortune was so strictly tied up that he might be reduced to the unpleasant necessity of supporting his household with his own money, Mr. Tempany resolved to remain a bachelor until a more favorable opportunity offered.

Of course this was a dreadful blow to him. It aged him considerably, for when he came to add up what his engagement had cost him one way and another in actual pounds, shillings and pence, he was fairly horrified at the amount. Mr. Bevis' account brought tears to his eyes and reduced him to a state of incipient imbecility for days. He had to pay it, however, nor did he get a farthing discount. But it was at least a faint consolation to think that he would recover something out of the fire. The bracelet would fetch a good round sum, even at second hand, and that reflection buoyed him up a little, so long as he was permitted to indulge in it. But alas! even this small solace was denied him, for in acknowledging a small parcel containing the presents she had made him the widow wrote as follows:

"Dear Mr. Tempany: Thanks for your sad, sad letter and inclosures. I do not like to think of what might have been but for those dreadful lawyers! I return all the dear gifts you gave me, except one, which I am sure you will allow me to keep and wear as a souvenir. The bracelet—your last gift—I cannot bring myself to part with, and I promise to keep it always. Your friend and well wisher,"

The editor of the Bradford Argus thinks that Bob Burdette's running to a fire in Bloomsburg was pathetic rather than humorous. The fire was in a smoke house, and Bob was overflowing with fun the whole evening. Will the Argus be kind enough to explain the pathetic part of this most affecting incident?

We have received the quarterly magazine from E. Ridley & Sons, one of the oldest and most reliable firms in New York City. The magazine contains interesting stories, poetry, musical notes, wit and humor, besides there is the "Home Department," and the "Talks to Children." In the part devoted to fashions may be found illustrated almost anything one could desire. The latest styles and fashions in dresses, for ladies, misses and children, in clothing for gents, youths and boys. Trimmings, laces, jewelry, hosiery, gents' furnishing goods, &c. Any one desiring a copy of this quarterly may obtain it by addressing E. Ridley & Sons, Cor. Grand & Allen Sts., New York, and remit 15 cents a copy or 50 cents a year.

Clean the Cellars.

In a few weeks more warm weather will be upon us, when decayed vegetable matter allowed to remain and ferment in cellars is frequently the unsuspected cause of typhoid fever and other diseases. Cabbage, turnips, beets, and all green matter liable to rot, should be promptly removed. The potatoes should be examined and have their sprouts rubbed off. Sinks are also liable frequently to become foul, and should receive due attention. Care in these respects will often save a doctor's bill and prevent an attack of serious illness.

Hit the Wrong Man.

Last Saturday morning while a ballast train was being unloaded near the coal schutes at Mahanoy Plane, James McGinness, an employee on the train, threw a stone at I. D. Lime, general dispatcher on the Mahanoy and Shamokin branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Road, who was standing close by, striking him on the left cheek, inflicting a terrible wound and knocking him senseless. When McGinness was taken into custody he said that he mistook Mr. Lime for M. M. L'Velle, a well known member of the Schuylkill county bar, against whom he has a grudge.

Irvin Bros. are doing a good business at their new store.

A good many strangers have recently moved to this village.

L. A. Riley & Co's new store is nearly completed, and will be ready for occupancy about May 1st.

Rev. Father Fields is dangerously ill.

There is an old shanty near here which until the Hungarians made their appearance was unoccupied. Now they use it as a boarding house. On Easter Sunday the inmates had a grand spree. A boxing match was one of the features of the entertainment. The fun soon assumed a serious nature and some of the participants were knocked over stumps and cut with knives. The guilty parties had a hearing before Squire Murphy.

Tobacco Rebate Labels.

The labels furnished by the Internal Revenue Department to persons intending to claim rebate on tobacco or cigars are about 2x3 inches, printed in red ink on white paper. Blank spaces are left in which the name of the claimant, his location, the number of his collection district, and the state can be written or printed.

To be entitled to claim rebate a dealer must have the equivalent of the tax on 125 pounds of tobacco, or 3,400 cigars. If, however, he has both cigars and tobacco packages, he will be entitled to the rebate if the tax paid on both together equals the above.

Every box of cigars, and every box, pail or bag of tobacco requires to have a separate label attached with mucilage or paste, at or before the time of inventory. After inventory it will be too late. Supposing a dealer to have 100 pounds of tobacco in two and four ounce bags and 500 cigars in boxes of 50 each, he will have altogether over 600 packages to label.

To save the trouble of writing the above mentioned particulars on each label, he is allowed to have them printed and pasted at his leisure, so as to be ready for the inventory, to be made on the 1st day of May.

The Dead Sea.

The Union-Leader pointed out a marked discrepancy between the statements recently made by two eminent lecturers in Wilkes-Barre in regard to the waters of the Dead Sea. On the one hand Colonel Sanford, in his lecture there last December, stated from his own experience that the assertion that a man could not sink in these waters was all nonsense, while on the other, Dr. Eccleston averred that no one could sink deeper than the chest. Both of these gentlemen have lectured here.

An examination of data shows that neither were quite correct, though of the two Dr. Eccleston was nearer the truth. The specific gravity of sea water is about 1.03. The specific gravity of the human body, in a natural condition, is slightly less than that of sea water, and therefore would under ordinary circumstances, float in the ocean. Now the specific gravity of the waters of the Dead Sea is about 1.240, or a trifle more than two-tenths heavier than ordinary sea water. It follows, therefore, that only eight-tenths of the human body would be submerged in the Dead Sea, and a bather entering these waters would find it impossible without exertion to sink below the level of his shoulders.

Pinafore.

An examination of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, exhibiting the derivation and history of its several provisions; by Charles R. Buckalew.

This volume, of over 350 pages, 8vo., has been in contemplation and preparation by the author, ever since the adoption of the constitution, of which it contains the text, history and judicial decisions in explanation of its provisions. It is a storehouse of citations and authorities. Not only have the constitutions of 1838, of 1790 and of 1776 been examined, but also those of all the other states, and of the United States. The decisions of our own courts are cited, and reference made to those of other states, in the examination of like or similar provisions. The several Acts of the British Parliament, when on the same subject matter are referred to or quoted.

The debates in convention are largely drawn upon, and are supplemented by the personal interest of the writer in them. So that we have in his discussion of various questions, not only the letter but the spirit of the intent of the convention. It goes without saying that no student of the constitution and of its history can afford to be without this book. It is the only one on this subject, and its distinguished author is probably the best qualified man in the state for this work. It is to be observed that every section of the "Declaration of Rights" and every section of the "constitution" and "schedule" are given, with notes and references more or less free; and in some cases conclusions and constructions are discussed at considerable length.

A very slight examination of the book will show the great labor bestowed upon it. At the head of each article is placed an analysis of its contents, and a quarter of a page of citation of authorities is not unusual. The book is beautifully printed; the text in conspicuous type, and the notes, comments and authorities in smaller letter. This is an additional and very great satisfaction to the student as well as to the general reader.

Chicago Letter.

EDITORS COLUMBIAN:—

Sunday is a day of rest here as well as elsewhere; we take our perfect ease then to our heart's content—it is the only day of the seven that we can call our own and we therefore take great advantage of the privilege. I accepted an invitation to visit "Lincoln Park" to day. It is too early in the season to see the park at it's best; however I feel fully repaid for the time spent there today. The grass is just long enough and green enough to make a delightful showing; but one misses the foliage of the trees and the fragrance of the flowers which you will find there later in the season. The greatest attraction at Lincoln Park, now, is centered on the animals. The sea-lion had a large crowd of enthusiastic admirers surrounding his domains. We happened there just in time to see him fed. His sole diet is raw fish thrown to him by the keeper. It was amusing to see the brute dive under the water and come up immediately under the piece and snap it up; he would sometimes come up with such a rush as to nearly double himself up in trying to get the fish as he would be about to pass it. We had the pleasure of visiting the cages, dens and pens containing the grizzly, black and cinnamon bears, the buffalo, deer, goats, owl, horned owl, eagle, raccoon, red fox, American wild cats, wolves, California and prairie quail, prairie chickens, prairie dogs, magpie, red and gray squirrels, &c., &c., usually seen in a "Zoo." What a blessing such places as parks are to mankind! There the poor can receive the same relief from care and trouble as the rich for the same price—nothing. It does one's heart good to see the little ones "doing" the sights with as much pleasure and interest apparently as their elders. One of the grandest, if not the grandest, views one gets, there is from the shore looking out upon Lake Michigan. The view to-day was too grand to be expressed by words. The sun shining here and there between the vast army of clouds which overhung the lake blended the light and the dark blue with the light and the dark green so beautifully that I am utterly unable to draw a pen picture that would do justice to the same. To cap the climax the wind was just strong enough to give the waters power to send a vast army of white caps to intermingle so beautifully with the darker colors I have mentioned. Away in the distance we could see a large vessel, but were unable to tell whether it was going out or coming in. Here one sees the "crib," rather the light house which marks the place where the crib is, from which Chicago receives it's supply of water. I am unable to describe the crib at this writing as it is far out in the lake and I did not go to see it; may be able to tell you about it at some future date. Coming back we went down to see the Palmer House, the Grand Pacific hotel and the Sherman House, all of which are seven stories high; the Montauk block which is ten stories, and the Post Office which is a massive structure built of stone and occupying one entire block, also the Court House which is built of lime stone and polished granite, and occupies one whole square. We also gazed upon the Board of Commerce building. The Palmer House is entirely fire-proof—it has everything inflamable covered with iron; the walls and ceilings are solid iron and there is nothing exposed which will hold a flame. It is simply a magnificent and wonderful structure.

Chicago has eight or ten parks and all connected by a system of boulevards which is thirty-two miles in extent and entirely encircles the city.

Very Truly Yours,
Chicago, April 23. H. W. McKELVY

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, APRIL 27, 1883.

The anti-treating bill was defeated in the senate on Wednesday.

The Philadelphia Recorder bill has been repealed by the Legislature and Lane has been ousted. This is true reform.

The big bridge between New York and Brooklyn is nearly completed and will be formally opened on May 24th.

The Grant medals commemorative of the 306 who voted for him for President at the Chicago convention in 1880 have at last been distributed. They are bronze with a portrait of Grant on one side and an inscription on the other. The idea of the medals originated with Chauncey I. Filley, then the postmaster of St. Louis, Mo., and as soon as they were finished the allotment for the Pennsylvania stalwarts was forwarded to Senator J. D Cameron at Washington. At that time the independent revolt was in full blast, and it was not Don Cameron's cue to distribute these memorials and thus render their recipients marked men for the campaign. Accordingly, his bad health was made a pretext for delaying the delivery until now. David Mouat who now languishes in a Philadelphia prison is one of the notorious 306.

THE PROHIBITION AMENDMENT.

The Agnew Prohibition Amendment has been defeated in the House. The amendment as originally introduced prohibited the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, but it was amended in the House by a compensation clause providing that all liquors left on the hands of dealers and manufacturers at the time the law should go into effect should be paid for by the State, and it was this clause that killed the bill, by a vote of 151 to 27.

Another Veto from the Governor.

Governor Pattison has vetoed the bill to equalize taxation for school purposes only in independent districts formed from parts of one or more than one county. His reasons are that the terms are local and special; it affects but a few school districts in the state; it creates new boards of county commissioners; it creates a new system of auditing school board officers; it creates new officers, and the title does not express the purpose of the bill. The house sustained the veto by a vote of 162 to 9.

A Circuit Court of Appeals.

Senator Wolverton reported affirmatively a bill establishing a Circuit Court of Appeals, consisting of five Judges, to be elected next fall, each voter to have the privilege of voting for three. Two of them are to hold office for five years and three for ten years. The non-partisan character of the bench is to be preserved in the usual manner as in the election of County Commissioners. The salary is $5,000 a year. The court will have appellate jurisdiction in cases to the amount of $1,000 on appeal by certiorari from the Common Pleas, except in cases in equity, and in cases of general jail delivery, except in cases of felonious assault, but shall not have jurisdiction on Constitutional questions. Its decisions shall be final when the bench is unanimous, unless three of the Judges certify that the case should go to the Supreme Court. When the bench is divided the right of appeal lies to the Supreme Court. The court is to sit in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Harrisburg, Erie, Williamsport and Wilkesbarre.

Brady and Kellogg Indicted.

CHARGED WITH RECEIVING FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN BRIBES.

Despite the protestations of Ex-Senator Kellogg's friends and denials as to his complicity in Star route frauds, the grand jury at Washington has returned a true bill against Brady and Kellogg, charging that they accepted a bribe, amounting to $15,000, for expediting mail service on certain routes controlled by Contractor Price. The document was a lengthy one and detailed the connection of Brady with the Post Office Department, and in five counts it was stated that the Second Assistant Postmaster General and Senator Kellogg on five occasions received $1,500 apiece for favors shown Price on his routes. Considerable surprise was created in the court room when the grand jury made this announcement, and Brady was observed to be somewhat nervous at the unfavorable consideration shown him in the report of the foreman. It has been asserted that this indictment would not be permitted to leave the jury room, and the result was a surprise in some quarters. There is considerable comment indulged in on all sides relative to the new indictments. The prospect of another four months' trial is welcomed with derision by everybody but the lawyers. Should the present trial terminate unfavorably to the government the probability is that the new indictments will never be tried.

Rich State Senators.

Pittsburg Leader.

Eckley B. Coxe is supposed to be worth $3,000,000. Next comes John E. Reyburn, president pro tem. Mr. Reyburn, like Coxe, has obtained his wealth by inheritance, and he is said to be a triple millionaire. The youthful Senator Adams, of Philadelphia, perhaps comes next. He, like Reyburn and Coxe, has inherited a bank account, which is estimated by those who know at $2,000,000. Lew Emery the oil king, is said to be worth only $500,000, although he is called a millionaire. Hall, of Elk, has $250,000 invested in lumbering and other enterprises. Wallace, the gold-haired Senator from Clearfield, strolls from side to side of the senate chamber, conscious that, if not a millionaire, he is worth many thousand dollars. Dill, of Erie, is worth $200,000. Stehman has several farms in Lancaster county and is worth about $450,000. McNeill, of Allegheny, Laird, of Westmoreland, and perhaps one or two others, are estimated at $100,000. Tom Cooper, despite his great reputation as a campaign mathematician, is said to be worth only $40,000. Lee, who has the reputation of spending his money as fast as he gets it and enjoying life generally, is said to be worth about $10,000, and John Stewart, the great leader of the Independents would tip the financial scale at about the same figure.

In a population of 4,500,000 in Pennsylvania there are only 500,000 church members. And yet people send money to foreign missions.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The following bills have passed finally in the Senate:

Senate bill to extend the time for the completion of railroads five years, provided $100,000 have been expended on the roads.

Senate bill changing the rate for catching loose logs in the Susquehanna from fifty cents a log to one dollar for one thousand feet board measure.

House bill requiring a district attorney to have practiced at the bar for two years.

Senate bill authorizing suits against the commonwealth was amended on third reading so as to allow action to be instituted for the collection of claims accruing or arising since 1838.

Senate bill abolishing the office of mercantile appraiser and imposing the duties of that office on assessors except in cities of the first class passed finally.

The bill empowering any city to take and hold donations of money, books, real and personal property for the purpose of a free library.

Senate bill repealing the act for the appointment of an inspector of steam boilers in Schuylkill, Northumberland and Columbia districts.

House bill relative to adoption of a city code in cities of the third class.

Senate bill validating the charters of building and loan associations and building and savings associations granted by the courts.

The anti-treating bill was amended on third reading to prohibit treating only in licensed places.

Mr. Adams introduced a bill subjecting to a fine of $500 the managers of any public hall or places of amusement who shall permit the aisles or passage way to be obstructed so as to impede free ingress or egress.

Senate bill requiring notaries public to place the time of the expiration of their terms on their seals was passed finally.

Senate bill to prohibit persons from treating other persons to intoxicating drinks was passed third reading, after an amendment offered by Mr. Henninger to except various malt or brewed liquors.

Mr. Hall amended, on third reading, the bill authorizing railroad companies to change their route or terminus shall be changed, if it be in any city.

Senate bill authorizing foreign corporations, doing business in the state, to purchase, sell and convey real estate.

Senate bill giving cities of the fifth class the benefit of the act to create poor districts.

House bill empowering corporate authorities of boroughs to lay footwalks along township roads.

Senate bill to prohibit change of text books more than once in five years.

Fixing salaries of officers in counties containing over sixty thousand and less than eighty thousand inhabitants.

Providing for the sale by the secretary of internal affairs of the reports of the geological survey.

To abolish the office of jury commissioner.

Prohibiting street passenger railway companies from working conductors, drivers and other persons employed by them more than twelve hours a day.

Authorizing the admission into reformatory schools and houses of refuge of youthful delinquents from Delaware.

Applying the general salary law to the counties of Luzerne and Wyoming.

To give harbor companies the right of eminent domain.

Senate bill allowing incorporated banks and banking institutions to change their name and place of business within the county where located.

In the House:

The bill appropriating $84,000 to the House of Refuge in Philadelphia passed finally.

The bill granting a pension of $96 annually to the surviving veterans of the Mexican war, and to the widows and orphans of soldiers and sailors of said war, was called up and read the third time, when Mr. Stees, of Schuylkill, moved that the house go into committee of the whole for the purpose of special amendment, which would add the veterans of the Florida war. Mr. Furth was called to the chair, the amendment was agreed to and the house adopted the report of the committee of the whole. The bill amended passed third reading.

The bill appropriating $10,000 to the society of the Home for Friendless Women and Children at Scranton was read the third time and passed finally—yeas 152, nays 12.

The appropriation of $87,000 to the Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind was read the third time and passed finally—yeas, 170; nays 1.

The appropriation of $30,000 to the Mercy Hospital at Pittsburg was read the third time and passed finally—yeas 146, nays 2.

The appropriation of $100,000 to the State normal schools was read the third time and passed finally—yeas, 141; nays 20.

Senate bill granting of free passes by railroads except to officers or employees of companies, was reported favorably with an amendment allowing the issuance of excursion and commutation tickets at special rates.

The bill to secure to laborers engaged in and about coal mines and manufactories of iron and steel the payment of their wages at regular intervals and in lawful money of the United States.

The judicial apportionment bill was considered on third reading. Mr. Merry, of Clinton, moved to go into committee of the whole for the purpose of special amendment, to strike out Potter from the Clinton district and place it with McKean county. Mr Niles strongly opposed the motion, and the colloquy between him and Mr. Merry caused considerable excitement. Mr. Sharpe said the gentleman from Clinton was the first on this floor to have the audacity to bring politics into this question, and he was sorry that the attack came from the democratic side of the house. Mr. Merry's amendmet was not agreed to, and the bill then passed finally.

The bill constituting eight hours a day's work was defeated—yeas, 74 nays 81.

The bill fixing the time at which the office of constables shall commence at the beginning of the regular term of court of quarter sessions immediately succeeding the election in February.

The bill to regulate policies of insurance on life, and to prevent wagering and gambling in policies.

The bill providing for securing the health and safety of persons employed in the coal mines was passed finally.

The bill to provide education and maintenance for neglected and destitute children of the commonwealth was read the third time. Mr. Amerman moved to go into committee of the whole for the purpose of general amendment. The motion was agreed to, and Mr. Birchfield, of Blair, was called to the chair. It was amended so that the county commissioners "may" instead of "shall" provide schools for such children; leaving it discretionary with the commissioners as to how much land is needed for the schools; not making it part of the common school system. These amendments were agreed to by the house, and the bill laid aside for final passage.

The bill for the better protection of passengers on steam railroads was read the third time and passed finally—yeas 128; nays, 19.

The bill to regulate the examinations of graduating classes of state normal schools was read the third time, and the yeas and nays were, yeas, 84; nays, 67. Lost, a constitutional majority not voting for the bill.

The bill making the register of wills in counties having more than 100,000 inhabitants, clerks of the orphans' court was read the third time and passed finally—yeas, 125; nays, 24.

The bill preventing the placing in peril the life and limbs of performers and exhibitors passed finally—yeas 123; nays 17.

House bill, No. 93, empowering the corporate authorities of boroughs to lay foot-walks along turnpike roads and assess the costs of paving, curbing and guttering the same on the owner of the adjoining lots, which had been amended in the senate by adding to the second section the words, "in the respective counties in which said boroughs may be located," was called up, and the senate amendments concurred in—yeas 150; nays 2.

A resolution, offered by Mr. Shafer, of Cameron, and referred to the printing committee, for the printing of five thousand copies of the game laws, was adopted.

Senate bill authorizing the erection and providing for the regulation of voluntary tribunals to adjust disputes between employers and employed in the iron, steel, glass, textile and coal trades—better known as the Wallace arbitration bill—was the first called up. It was read the third time, and passed finally—yeas, 160; nays, 2.

The bill fixing the compensation of township, ward and borough assessors at two dollars per diem, was read the third time and passed finally—yeas, 109; nays, 31.

The Dynamite Scare.

PLOTS WHICH HAVE THEIR ORIGIN IN NEW YORK.

The London Standard has an editorial on the dynamite disclosures, of which the following is an extract: "The striking disclosures in Bow street in reference to the dynamite conspiracy, whatever their ultimate value may be against the prisoners, leave little doubt in the minds of the public on both sides of the Atlantic that the murderous design originated in New York and that the shield of American freedom is being prostituted to cover the arm of the assassin. It is indeed remarkable that the story of the plot, as far as it is yet before us, does not present any of the conspirators, whether principals or tools, as either English or Irish by domicile, or even, it would seem, by nationality.

"Such evidence as already given indicates that not only was the conspiracy hatched in New York, but that it was found necessary or desirable by conspirators to import from America at considerable expense all the men who were to take active part in its execution. The men who made up their minds to bring about the freedom of Ireland by the sacrifice of the innocent lives of all nationalities in the heart of London can have known little or nothing but what they were told of the supposed tyranny of the Saxon and assumed wrongs of the Celt. The equal laws and the justice which remains calm and impartial, even in such days as these, the generous hand in times of distress which England has ever extended to her weaker sister are never heard of by the New York artisan, who glories in his Irish descent. The passion of traditional animosity and prejudice is carefully planted and nurtured by interested hands. The fear of the consequences of refusal and sometimes apparently the greed of pecuniary reward seem to be the motives which enlist such men in an enterprise for the wholesale destruction of innocent lives and the specious pretext of spurious patriotism.

"But the responsibility, moral as well as legal, which rests upon the country in which such miscreants make their lair is, we believe, already felt and appreciated by the vast majority of the American public. Great Britain might, we think, well ask the United States to extend their extradition law so as to include dynamite bravos; but, in truth, extradition is not what is more especially needed in the present state of affairs. The real point is to bring within the reach of American punishment those who conspire in New York to commit these outrages. There is no doubt they can be brought within the English law of treason-felony if any overt act is committed in England by any of the conspirators. But it is American law which can most effectively punish or deter those who at present openly concoct these schemes in the cities of the United States. Is it an offense against American law to conspire in America to commit murder in England? If not it ought to be made so."

A Thing of Beauty.

The labors of the McCracken apportionment committee must have been severe indeed, judging from the elaborate piece of gerrymandering joiner-work it has turned out. How the republican majority of that committee must have cudgeled their brains and seared their consciences to figure out an apportionment which gives the 407,423 democrats who voted for General Hancock for president ten congressional districts and the 444,676 republicans who voted for General Garfield eighteen congressional districts, is apparent from the incongruous and unshapely combinations of counties and parts of counties and the unequal distribution of population which characterize the apportionment they have devised.

In Philadelphia the principal democratic wards are crowded into one district in order to preclude all possibility of the election of more than one democratic congressman in that city. Lehigh county is divided, the principal portion being attached to Berks and a strip on the eastern edge thrown in with Northampton, Pike, Monroe and Wayne. The latter district extends over two-thirds of the eastern width of the state. The Fifteenth district, to consist of the counties of Bradford, Tioga, Potter, Clinton and Sullivan, almost surrounds Lycoming which latter goes into the Sixteenth district with Northumberland, Montour and Columbia. It is shaped for all the world like one of those stuffed elephants sometimes exhibited on the comic stage. The Sixteenth has as many angles as a trapezohedron cut bias. The Seventeenth, Bedford, Fulton, etc., begins at the Maryland line and reaches within two counties of New York. It looks like a huge crane reconnoitering the Susquehanna for fish. The Eighteenth, Blair, Cambria and Somerset, may be likened to a great owl on its perch. The Twenty-first, Clearfield, Clinton, Clarion and Jefferson, extends from the Susquehanna to the Allegheny river, a distance of nearly 150 miles, and resembles the school boy game of "tit, tat, toe," or the diagonal squares of a checker-board. The Twenty-fourth district separates from Allegheny county and attaches to Westmoreland sufficient republican territory to make a republican district. So much for the shapeliness and compactness of the districts.

The distribution of population to the several districts by the McCracken committee is a marvel of inequality. Lancaster county with a population of 139,447 is made a district; Chester and Delaware with 139,582 constitute another; Blair, Cambria and Somerset with 132,661 another; Beaver, Lawrence and Mercer with 129,078 another, and Armstrong, Butler and Indiana with 140,704 are joined for the benefit Kiskiminetas White. All of these are strong republican districts. Now look on the other side of the picture. Berks and part of Lehigh with a population 152,520 constitute a district; Monroe, Northampton, Pike, Wayne and a part Lehigh with 169,438 another; Luzerne and Carbon with 164,988 another; Schuylkill and Lebanon with 168,450 another; Bucks and Montgomery with 165,150 another; Lycoming, Northumberland, Montour and Columbia with 158,486 another, Clearfield, Centre, Clarion and Jefferson with 149,593 another; Adams, Cumberland and York with 166,273 another; Fayette, Greene and Washington with 142,533 another; and the third district of Philadelphia with 157,874 another. These last are democratic districts with the exception of Bucks and Montgomery and Lebanon and Schuylkill which may be fairly regarded as doubtful. It will be seen that under this apportionment it would require a population of 1,600,000 in round numbers to elect 8 democrats certain and divide two districts between the two parties, or 200,000 inhabitants for every certain democratic congressman, while 2,685,000 in round numbers would elect 18 republican congressmen, averaging about 149,000 inhabitants to every certain republican district. This is equality with a vengeance. This is fairness with a fiddlestick. Mr. McCracken should go back to his independent Lawrence county constituents and pose just once more as a reformer.—Patriot.

FROM THE PRESIDENT OF BAYLOR UNIVERSITY.

"Independence, Texas, Sept. 26, 1882.

Gentlemen:

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Has been used in my household for three reasons:—

1st. To prevent falling out of the hair.
2d. To prevent too rapid change of color.
3d. As a dressing.

It has given entire satisfaction in every instance. Yours respectfully,

WM. CAREY CRANE."

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is entirely free from uncleanly, dangerous, or injurious substances. It prevents the hair from turning gray, restores gray hair to its original color, prevents baldness, preserves the hair and promotes its growth, cures dandruff and all diseases of the hair and scalp, and is, at the same time, a very superior and desirable dressing.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

THE MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT

BAILEY, BANKS & BIDDLE.

NO PART OF THE BUSINESS of Bailey, Banks & Biddle is conducted with greater perfection of detail or more general satisfaction to purchasers than that of selecting and sending goods in response to requests by mail.

WHETHER THE ORDER IS for costly or inexpensive articles—whether for an assortment to enable a purchaser to decide at home which article suits best, or for something to be shipped directly to a third person as a present, the purchaser relying upon the house for a good choice—the selection is invariably made by an expert of well-tried taste, possessing thorough knowledge both of the goods and the changeful fashions.

DIRECTIONS ARE INTELLIGENTLY followed; the least hint of preference is carefully noted, and in every instance the newest and most desirable goods are sent, excepting when an article not quite so new presents such inducements in price as to make it seem best to inform the customer and await further instructions. Full explanations are given whenever the interest of the customer requires them.

GOODS MAY ALWAYS BE RETURNED if not entirely satisfactory.

Three Strong Points.

Point One:

Men's Spring Overcoats; a big stock that takes in everything from the very plain low priced to the finest, from the lightest fancy color to the plain black, from the smallest youths' to the largest of large men's sizes. A commanding stock that every light overcoat buyer must see—if he cares to know the market.

Point Two:

Fifteen Lines of Men's Business Suits. A little money is a powerful thing in Oak Hall. Witness the following:

Fancy Cassimere Sack Suits at $8.50, and the same goods in walking coat style, at $9.00. Our only boast on them is that they are good for the money. Manhattan Cheviots in six full lines, both sack and walking coats, at $10.00. The buttons and trimmings of these suits are worth special attention. Plain Cassimeres; three varieties, in sack style, at $10.00. Very reliable.

Five styles of Harris Cassimere Suits, of quiet styles, and in both Sack and Walking Coats, at $16.00. The well-known reputation of these goods speak for themselves.

These fifteen lines are not fragments pulled together for an advertisement. They represent two thousand suits, and goods to make more. There is business in them.

Point Three:

Custom Made Clothing. A large display of piece goods to order. There are very great bargains in all the following lines:

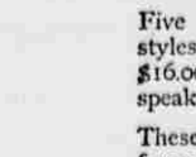

Class A, in any ordinary business style,	$18.00
Class B, " " " "	20.00
Class C, " " " "	22.50
Class D, " " " "	25.00

Our "points" are made short and sharp for practical people.

"Both Col. Freeze and yourselves are to be congratulated on the production of a very interesting history."

Williamsport has been selected for the Annual Encampment of the Third Brigade. Strong efforts were made to have Danville chosen, and a promise was made by those in authority to give Bloomsburg a chance to show its advantages, but neither of the latter places were given a fair show.

Dr. J. B. Laubach of Benton and Miss Hattie J. Derr were married at the residence of the bride's parents in Hughesville, Pa., on April 10th, by Rev. E. C. Houck. We congratulate the Doctor and his bride, and wish them their full share of happiness and prosperity.

The Exchange Hotel is undergoing repairs. The main hall, office and dining room have been newly painted, and the walls and ceilings handsomely ornamented with panels and borders. There is not a hotel in the state that has a more pleasant dining room than the Exchange.

Mr. J. B. Skeer, the uptown merchant, at the old stand of W. B. Allen, has just put in a fine line of dry goods, notions, queensware, &c., and added to the stock of groceries. Mr. Skeer has had many years' experience in the mercantile business and knows how to suit the tastes of purchasers.

Some of our exchanges caution the public to look out for the fellow who is tramping over the country selling a powder, which he alleges was made by Edison for the purpose of increasing the illuminating power of coal oil to that of electric light. He asks $3 per box for it, but it is not worth three cents. Don't touch it.

The Catawissa Paper Mill was entirely destroyed by fire on Thursday of last week at about six o'clock in the evening. The fire originated either from spontaneous combustion in the rag room, or from a stroke of lightning. The loss is variously estimated from $25,000 to $75,000. Whether the mill will be rebuilt is not yet decided.

Solomon Willard, an employee of the D. L. & W. road, had his hand crushed at Rupert last Friday while coupling oars. The wound was dressed by Dr. Shattuck. A similar accident happened to a man named Reninger at the same place a few days before, for whom Dr. Shattuck amputated a finger.

Alexander & Bro., have recently hung a new sign under the awning in front of their store. They are carrying a very large stock of tobacco, cigars, pipes, confectionery &c., and their wholesale trade is constantly increasing. All who deal with them will find them square, and their goods are the best in the market.

We were recently shown through John W. Hoffman's mill at Lightstreet, and while we must confess that our knowledge of mills is somewhat limited, we could see that this one is supplied with all the necessary machinery to do first-class work. Excellent flour is made there by the new process, and the mill fully maintains the high reputation which it has always enjoyed.

Mr. J. M. Buckalew showed us an interesting relic a few days ago. It is a brass coin or medal about the size of a nickel in diameter. On one side is the head of George III, and the words "Georgius III, Rex De Gratia"; on the other is a shield and the words "In Memory of the Good Old Days." The piece was found near Shickshinny and bears date 1758. It was probably worn around the neck of an Indian.

M. C. Sloan & Bro. on Wednesday turned out a beautiful wagon for Peter Gross for his son and son-in-law, who are in the bottling business at Nanticoke. The wagon weighs 820 pounds, and is built in the best of style and very strong. The name of M. C. Sloan & Bro. on a wagon is a guarantee of its quality.

A large break occurred in the canal just about the aqueduct at Espy on Tuesday night. The break is about eighty feet long, and the force of the water tore out the bottom of the canal about twelve feet below the level. It will take some time to repair it, as the material to fill in with will have to be hauled some distance.

The D. L. & W. railroad has reduced the fare from Bloomsburg to Danville from forty-one to forty cents. The one cent has long been a source of annoyance in making change. They have also made excursion rates to Wilkesbarre. Many of our people have occasion to go up there on business, returning the same day, and the passenger traffic will no doubt be largely increased by this liberality on the part of the company. Fare for the round trip $1 95 and tickets good until used.

We have arranged to grind LEWIS' PURE WHITE LEAD IN CAMPBELL'S AND THAYER'S PURE LINSEED OIL, and are prepared to offer inducements in price to dealers and consumers. HENRY S. REAY,

For the third time recently the Opera House was very slimly attended on Friday evening last, at the presentation of "An English Romance." The play is good, with enough humor in it to make it funny, and enough villainy to make it exciting. The parts were well taken, and if a fair sized audience had been present to inspire the actors with a little more enthusiasm, it would have been far beyond mediocrity. It is hard work playing to empty seats. We understand that because of the want of patronage the managers will not bring any more plays here until next fall.

Green truck at Kinports & Bro's every Thursday and Friday mornings.

The county commissioners have been busy hearing appeals in the different townships this month. It is no easy matter to so adjust the assessed value of all properties that everybody will be satisfied. Property is never so cheap as at the time when its taxable valuation is to be fixed, although it would not be possible to buy a single acre at the assessed value. The general plan that has been followed has been to take fifty per cent of the actual value, but this is so irregularly carried out by assessors that there is great discrepancy between the several townships, and in many instances too much difference between properties in the same township. All this the commissioners have endeavored to adjust, and so far as we have been able to learn, have performed their task in an impartial and satisfactory manner.

Rohrsburg Items.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

Being a reader of your paper and not having seen anything from this "neck o' the woods" for some time I thought I would again try my hand and furnish you a few items.

Spring has opened in earnest now and the farmers are plowing preparatory to sowing their summer crops. The winter grain looks very promising in this valley.

School opened on last Monday at this place with a large attendance. J. B. Follmer is the teacher.

The newly appointed M. E. minister, Rev. Stiles, appears to be a young man of talent and thoroughly in earnest. May he be the means of doing much good.

The teachers of Greenwood township have organized for the purpose of holding institutes during the entire year. We think this is a move in the right direction. Meetings will be held monthly. The next will be held at the Centre school house on Saturday, April 28th, beginning at 1 p. m. All who are interested in the advance of education are invited to attend.

We notice Mr. A. S. Kramer, who recently graduated at the Wyoming Commercial College, is again at home, where he proposes following the plow for the summer, instead of keeping books.

Mr. Peter Kline who has for some time been employed by Beishline Bros., on their steam saw mill, as stocker, has returned to town.

M. M. Appleman & Son are turning out some very good and handsome two-horse wagons now. We think they can't be beat.

W. F. Hess is selling out his entire stock of dry goods, &c., at auction, and very low. He is making room for Mr. Rantz who has purchased the property and expects to open a store soon.

There were several Indian boys and girls brought to this township again from the Carlisle school, for the summer. The farmers have found them very good hands generally.

We learn that H. F. Albertson, who started for the West a few days ago, has arrived safely at his destination. His many friends wish him success in any business in which he may engage.

ANON.

An Answer from Espy.

ESPY, April 24th, 1883.

MESSRS EDITORS:—

The Catawissa News Item of April 19th in referring to the accident near this place on the N. & W. B. R. R.—says "just opposite Espy by which a freight train was wrecked, the engine being hurled down the embankment and five cars derailed," and further, "that the slide was witnessed by a number of workmen in the Espy boat yard, and a couple of men out on the river in a boat, any of whom had ample time to have gone over the river and warned the approaching train. What actuated them to remain passive spectators can only be conjectured. Had a couple of the crew been killed it would not have been such a funny happening for the Espyites. Shame on them!" The News Item states that every precaution had been taken to guard against accidents of the above description, as this section of the road is so located as to be in danger from them at any time in the Spring.

Mr. Editor, I was not on duty that afternoon in the boat yard, being unwell; had I been I should have acted as other "Espyites" did—remained a passive spectator, for the very important reason given by the News Item that accidents of that kind are liable to occur at any time in the Spring, and that every precaution had been taken to guard against them. The statement that everyone who witnessed the slide had ample time to cross the river is not correct. The distance from the yard to the nearest canal bridge, where a boat might have been obtained, and across the river to a point up the road far enough to have given the proper signal to a heavy freight train on a down grade, would have been in all a mile, nearly half of that distance to be rowed against a strong current. It was stated by some of the train hands that they met a track walker at a point where it would have been necessary to commence slowing the train, and he informed the engineer that the road was clear. A party who claims to have been standing on the canal bridge and saw the slide, also saw a man going up the road just passing the point of Ruckle's island about three hundred yards from where the slide occurred. The unfortunate "Espyite" had neither speaking trumpet or field-glass and therefore could not tell who the man was or hail him. There are several parties who claim to have heard or seen the slide, and of course would have made some effort to have stopped the train had they thought it necessary. From all the information that can be gathered there was an interval of from twenty minutes to probably a half hour from the time the slide occurred until the engine went over the bank—not more than time enough to have crossed the river. I have no hesitancy in saying that there is not a man or boy in Espy who would not have turned out and rendered any assistance they could, if the slightest danger to the train had been apprehended, especially the two boys, Hummel and Creveling, who were in the boat. For humanity and manliness their superiors are seldom met. We are thankful that the boys escaped being called Algerines, as they happened to be in a boat on the river at the time, or in other words Small-rate Pirates. Of course the boys might have signalled the train, but as slides had been almost a daily occurrence they supposed, as every other person did, that a watchman was near enough to that point at all times to warn an approaching train of any danger, and when the boys saw the train pitching headlong into the slide they lay on their oars in frightful amazement watching the result just as older persons would have done. The Espy boat yard is a branch of business belonging to the Canal Company, where every man is expected to do his duty. We have a superintendent and a foreman who are ever mindful of that fact; we are not looked upon, however, as chattles; we are not prevented from looking across the river at a train or any other object of interest passing. Time killing, however, in our department, is at no time the order of the day. Either one of the managers would have suspended their operations and concentrated their entire force if it had been for a moment thought necessary. We all supposed that there was a standing order that all trains should be run at a speed at that point that they could be controlled in any emergency. The N. & W. B. R. R. is a well built and well managed road, we believe, having advantages not possessed by many other roads, having a solid bed and being almost destitute of high trestling, deep cuts and tunnels; the principal point of danger on the road, I am told, is the Espy bluff, where the slide occurred. At that point the rock pitches at an angle of about eighty degrees, resembling, somewhat, the convex of a French roof, covered only by a few feet of loose matter; the ordinary jar of a heavy train in wet weather is liable to cause a slide. Whilst I do not possess any knowledge of engineering or practical railroading, I think the only means of permanent security at that point would be to blast out the rock a sufficient width to build a wall of masonry to form a pocket to receive such loose matter as might slide down, and the wall to be securely braced with heavy timber. Mr. Editor, I have no doubt but that the road could be made safe and convenient with less labor and expense than many others in this section. After this is all done it will only be a steam railway managed by human beings, liable to make miscalculations, and accidents will occur on that as well as on other roads until mechanical science shall have superceded steam railways—just as electic telegraphy is soon to be superceded by the more improved telephone. While I write there are workmen engaged clearing away a slide near the place the former one occurred. We hope our friend of the Catawissa News Item will not have to call us barbarians or brutes again, or to apply to us the ancient tribal name of "ites," the common name for the wicked nations encountered by the host of Israel while journeying from Egypt to the Promised Land, whom Joshua and other leaders were directed by the Almighty to destroy. The word Espyites applied to us at the present day, signifies a rough, unmannerly people who have not made much progress in Christian civilization and general intelligence. Whilst we may not have made as much progress, perhaps, as some of our neighbors in surrounding villages, we are sorry to be informed that we are degenerating and little better than the Feegees or Patagonians. We can hardly believe that our neighbors, in summing up the result of the disaster, would so grossly misrepresent us. We hope it was the result of hasty and untruthful information, and when all the facts in the case are heard we hope that he will vindicate us by setting them forth in their true light. Very Respectfully,

A BOAT-YARD MAN.

The examination of the Senior Class at the Normal School will take place on Monday, June 4th, by the following committee: Prof. Geo. P. Beard of Washington county; Supt. R. M. McNeal of Dauphin county; Supt. J. S. Grimes, of this county; Dr. Higbee, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and his assistant, Mr. Houck. There are thirty-six in the class, and students in the scientific course.

Death.

Miss Hattie M. Vanderslice died on Tuesday, April 24th, 1883, at the residence of her brother, John H. Vanderslice in Milan, Rock Island Co., Ill. She was the youngest daughter of J. H. Vanderslice who died in Bloomsburg, October 26, 1874. For many years a school teacher, Miss Vanderslice was known to many of the friends of education in Columbia and Luzerne counties. In 1881 she commenced her second term of school in Hazleton, but before the Christmas holidays, her declining health compelled her to quit the school and give up the profession. Since then she has been traveling hoping to find relief by change of climate. When but a child she was received into the Presbyterian church by Rev. D. J. Waller, Sr., and has ever lived an exemplary christian life. A short time since she wrote a friend: "I have, at most, but a few days to live. There are many things I should like to do but if my time has come I am ready to go." She leaves many warm friends who will deeply mourn her loss.

All kinds of vendue notes kept at the COLUMBIAN office.

Mt. Carmel.

Mt. Carmel is probably one of the most active coal towns in the anthracite regions. It is situated in the south eastern corner of Northumberland county and is about equidistant from the county seats of Columbia, Northumberland, Schuylkill and Montour counties—in fact it is so near the line of Columbia that it requires but a few minutes walk to step over. The collieries are working mostly on full time, with liberal wages for the workman. The tradesmen are all busily engaged, but some branches are entirely overdone. If one-half of the grocerymen should retire the balance would have a lucrative business. The rapid growth of Mt. Carmel in the past few years has made a rush of the business men in the grocery department until the profits are now shared among too many. Of the professional men there is a liberal supply of Doctors, among whom is D. T. Krebs, a former citizen of Lightstreet, Columbia county, who has an extensive practice. The attorneys, however, are lacking, one gentleman is left to do the work. A first class attorney might here find a good field for business. The borough fathers should enforce stringent laws in regard to paving and grading. Time ought not be lost in this particular, as it would add to the value of the property and encourge men who are looking up places for business or manufacture. In a short time they expect a good supply of water from the large reservoir now in the course of erection on the mountain tops above Centralia. M. K. Watkins, editor and proprietor of the Mt. Carmel News has made many improvements in his office, so that it now equals any in that section. With the addition of steam or water power his office will be complete.

Use Caw's ink. It is the best. For sale at the COLUMBIAN office.

Physicians not only heal themselves with Kidney-Wort, but prescribe it for others for the worst cases of biliousness and constipation, as well as for kidney complaints. If you feel out of sorts and don't know why, try a package of Kidney-Wort and you will feel like a new creature.

NEW JERSEY WINE SENT TO EUROPE.

The success of Mr. Speer, the great wine man of New Jersey, has arisen from the strict purity and valuable properties of his wines for invalids and feeble persons, and his reputation extends over the whole Union and in Europe as being a reliable producer of pure wines. His Port Grape Wine is now being ordered by families in Dresden, London and Paris for its superior medicinal virtues, and its blood making quality, owing probably to the iron contained in the brown shale rock soil in which the vines grow. For sale by C. A. Kleim, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Millions of packages of the Diamond Dyes have been sold without a single complaint. Everywhere they are the favorite Dyes.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough, at once. Mothers do not be without it. For lame back, side, or chest, use Shiloh's Porus Plaster. Sold by J. H. Kinports.

Stranger than Fiction.

THE REMARKABLE CAREER OF A VERMONT MURDERER.

Henry DeBosyns, one of the most eqtraordinary criminals of the age, is to be hanged to-day, April 27, at Elizabethtown, a little village on Lake Champlain. His crime is commonplace enough, being that of wife murder, but his career has been a most remarkable one. A year ago last summer he drifted from New York city up the Hudson, and thence along the western shore of Lake Champlain until he reached the town of Essex, where he procured employment as a farm laborer. After a brief courtship he married Elizabeth Wells, a widow much his senior in years, who owned a small property. On the 1st of August, 1882, Mr. and Mrs. DeBosyns were seen driving out of the village, and after a brief interval DeBosyns was seen continuing the journey alone. The woman not making her appearance search was made, which resulted in the finding of her mangled and lifeless body concealed under a mass of leaves and rubbish near the side of the road. Circumstances plainly pointed to the husband as the murderer. He was arrested and upon his person was found a quantity of articles of personal property, which were identified as belonging to his wife. The trial took place last March, and the evidence, though entirely circumstantial in its character, was overwhelming as to the respondent's guilt. The jury was out only ten minutes and returned with a verdict of murder in the first degree,

AN EXTRAORDINARY CAREER.

DeBosyns was born nearly fifty years ago, it appears, at Belem, Portugal two miles from Lisbon,on the River Tagus. When he was very young his parents moved to France, and he was educated at a communal school, the seminary of St. Srieux, and the Normal Superior school at Paris. His education was thorough and extensive, and he can write and speak six languages—English, French, Italian, Spanish, Greek and Portugese—and can less perfectly speak and understand several other languages. While yet a mere lad he sailed with a north polar expedition under Leclaire, and was gone nearly two years—February, 1848 to October 1850. In 1854, with his father and brother, he volunteered for the Crimean war, and served in the French army in the Crimea for a couple of years. A few years of peace followed, in which DeBosnys completed his education, but on the breaking out of the war with Austria, in 1859, he joined MacMahon's army, in which, however, he saw but a few months' service, sailing in the autumn to China with the French contingent. Returning to France, he joined the French expedition to Mexico in 1861, and after a few months joined the Mexican side, becoming a captain of guerillas under Lopez. In this service he was severely wounded in an engagement, and, conceiving a distaste for the Mexican system of warfare, he came north and, being cured of his wound, enlisted in the Fourth Pennsylvania volunteers in 1863.

WOUNDED AT GETTYSBURG.

A short time afterward the battle of Gettysburg was fought, and in it DeBosnys was severely wounded in the head and left had. His injuries procured his discharge from the army. and in 1864 he went back to France, where, in two months, he married a Mlle Desmaris. Matrimony, however, failed to eradicate his love ot adventure, and after a honeymoon of only two months he sailed on another Arctic expedition, and was absent in the polar regions nearly three years—from July, 1864, to February, 1867. Returning he went to Rome, thence to Paris, thence to New York and thence to the Indian territory. The outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war called him from his aboriginal retirement, and he crossed the sea and entered the French army, rising by successive promotions until he became colonel under General Bourbaki. He served all through the war with varying fortunes, at its close escaping to Marseilles, whence he shipped for America. On this side the ocean his careeer was not so brilliant. He fell by degree until he became a tramp, wandering about the country and doing odd jobs of work as a painter and a farm laborer; and finally came the crime which put an end to his restless career.

MYSTERY AS TO HIS IDENTITY.

Besides the extraordinary facts of his life there is a good deal of mystery about the man. DeBosnys is merely an assumed name,and what his real name is no one knows, or from the present outlook, ever will know. The murderer is extremely reticent about his personal antecedents, his family and his friends. Since his arrest he has communicated with the French consul at New York, but of course that official could do nothing to shield him from the consequences of his crime. At the trial DeBosnys was very sick, and had to be taken into court. He listered to all the proceedings with an air of the most complete indifference—an indifference which disappeared only at the passing of the death sentence, when the wretched man broke down and wept and sobbed aloud. He subsequently attempted to starve himself to death, but the jail authorities frustrated the attempt. Of late he has manifested toward jailors and vistors the most ferocious savagery, and no one can do anything with him. He spends his time writing his autobiography, and a singular document it must prove to be. Altogether it is a most extraordinary case and DeBosnys is a most extraordinary man.

King Kalakaua's Coins.

THE DESIGNS OF THE DIES FOR THE HAWAIIAN NEW MONEY PREPARED.

Superintendent Snowden, of the United States Mint, Philiadelphia, has just had prepared designs of the dies for the coins to be struck off for circulation in the Hawaiian islands. The money has been ordered by King Kalakaua, and will be coined with the permission of the United States treasury department. On one side of the coin will be the king's face and on the other a portion of the great seal of his country. The denomination of the pieces will be indicated in the Hawaiian and English languages. There will be akahi dalas, hapalua dalas and hapahas, or dollars, half dollars and quarters respectively. There will likewise be dimes but the name of that piece of silver has not been translated into Hawaiian. In size and weight the money will be equal to United States coins. As soon as the designs have been decided upon the dies will probably be sent to San Francisco, where the first batch of money, to the value of $1,000,000 will, it is said, be made. This will be at least the second time that money of another nationality has been coined by our government. A few years ago a large amount of nickel money was made in Philadelphia for Venezuela.

A Wild Whale Hunt.

HOW SOME INDIANS OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC CAPTURED A LEVIATHAN—AN EXCITING SPORT.

From the Seattle Chronicle.

At Neah bay, around Cape Flattery and down the coast from Tatoosh to Gray's Harbor, live various tribes of Indians, who, as hunters and fishers, are as fearless as any race of aboriginal men in the known world. While the writer was at Quillute, the Indian village forty miles below Cape Flattery, last fall, a whale was sighted off the beach and four canoes at once started toward him. Soon we were upon the monster, who, lolling lazily along paid no heed to the demonstrations of his puny assailants. But he was rudely awakened. The foremost canoe darted forward and "thud!" went the heavy harpoon into his broad back, buried nearly to the shaft. The canoe was stopped and suddenly backed, and none to soon, for with a terrific smash of his flukes on the water, barely missing the nearest canoe, he sounded. A number of sealskin bladders, fast to the harpoon line, were thrown over, and each canoe, in turn as it came up, made fast with a line to the foremost canoe. Up came the monster, and with a fearful lurch all four canoas were dragged through the water at a fearful rate as he started for the ocean.

Four or five miles were run at this rate when his pace slackened and the hindmost canoe was hauled cautiously past the others and another harpoon was dexterously planted and this canoe assumed the front place in the procession, with the others bringing up the rear. Another wild rush, but shorter than the first, and a repetition of the performance, until there were half a dozen harpoons affixed and double as many sealskin bladders drifting around the exhausted monster, preventing his sinking or sounding finally, after hours of a prolonged fight for his life against his relentless foes, the coup de grace was given with a lance, a final plunge and he was ours. Three hours of paddling with a nasty little swell on and the whale sunk beneath the water, was a hard task before the whalers before the 'prise could be beached and fairly called our own. but gallantly they buckled to it, keeping time to their work with the high-keyed, monotonous chant and an occasional ear-piercing, blood curdling yell interjected into it that was calculated to raise a casual spectator's hair on end.

On the beach the entire remaining population of the village were awaiting around huge bonfires the hunters, but by no means in silence, for the yelling, whooping, singing, crouching, dancing, dusky, half-naked figures, as they plunged in and out the ruddy blaze of the huge drift-wood fires, reminded one of the descriptions of the infernal regions and raised grave doubts as to the truth of Bob Ingersoll's famous doctrines. The canoes are safely beached, the whale hauled as far as strong hands can drag him and left till the out going tide exposes his full proportions on the beach, when knife and axe and saw do their work till of the huge animal aught is left but a few well stripped bones, on and over which the village dogs feed and fight and snarl till the incoming tide covers them with a layer of sand.

The carcass is divided among all concerned in the capture, then and there alike, except the honor piece, extending around the animal and including the dorsal fin, is the property of him whose lucky harpoon was the first to strik the whale. For many days feasts, songs and small potlaches celebrate their luck capture, and the village finally assumes its normal condition.

Only a Pansy Blossom.

BUT THE OLD MAN WANTS A WHOLE FLOWER GARDEN.

Up Second avenue the other night five young men softly entered a yard, arranged themselves in a semi-circle on the grass, and suddenly began to sing, while a guitar and a banjo added their sugary notes to the general sweetness. As the song was finished a sash went up and a masculine voice called out:

"Splendid! Beautiful! Gentlemen, please repeat!"

The band on the grass was only too happy to accommodate, and "Only a Pansy blossom" went floating again on the night breeze.

"Entrancing! entrancing!" exclaimed the man at the window. "Gentlemen, I don't want to put you to trouble, but if you would only sing that over once more!"

The song dragged a little this time, and the alto voice seemed to have swallowed a troche down the wrong pipe, but it ended at last, and the old man called out:

"That's what I call singing, that is! Gentlemen, I'm no hog, but if I could prevail upon you to render that delightful poem once more, it would be a kindness I never could forget!"

There was a great deal of growling in undertones, but the leader gave the key, and for the fourth time the neighborhood was filled with dreadfully faded pansy blossoms. When the last note died away the old man clapped his hands and exclaimed:

"Better and better! You have my heartfelt thanks. The old woman is deaf, my darter is in Pontiac, and the hired gal quit yesterday, or I'd have 'em all stick their heads out to thank you in person! Good night, gentlemen—good night, and if you see fit to come to-morrow evening I'll have the old woman sot up with a bed quilt wrapped around her!"—Detroit Free Press.

Camden and Atlantic Railroad—Arrangements for the Coming Season.

Preparations are being made by this company for a heavy spring and summer business. New steel rails are being laid and the whole road-bed is being brought to the highest standard of excellence. The cars of the Camden and Atlantic Railroad are handsome and comfortable, and those requiring renewals have been greatly improved since last season. The Woodruff parlor cars, which are attached to all express trains, are luxurious and elegant. The 'ninety minute' ride between the Delaware and the Atlantic, in the fine cars and over the smooth track of this Company, is now one of pleasure and not of fatigue.

It will be of interest to visitors to Atlantic City to know that through trains on this road will run upon a very similar schedule next summer to that of last year, and that trains will continue to leave Vine street and Shackamaxom street as heretofore.

The greater part of the hotels in Atlantic City are now open, and are well filled and frequently crowded, with people of the best society of Philadelphia, New York and other cities, who are seeking health and rest in the invigorating atmosphere of this favorite resort.

A Petrified Indian.

THE AMUSING PRANK PLAYED UPON SOME ENGLISHMEN BY THE LATE GENERAL BARNES.

The death of Surgeon General Barnes recalls an incident which took place a good many years ago and attracted much attention at the time. Shortly after he was appointed assistant surgeon in the army he was sent out, with several other members of the medical corps, to Kansas, at that time a howling wilderness. One day a young lieutenant in the camp received a letter from a friend in the East, saying that a brace of Englishmen had started for the far West on a hunting expedition, and might be expected at the fort by a certain time. Some one suggested that, as Kansas was an unknown country, a hoax of some kind would be eminently proper, and everything was kept pretty quiet until the day before the visitors were expected, when the camp rang with the news of a curious phenomenon. Two of the officers, it was said, becoming attracted by the representations of a friendly Indian, had followed him to an out-of-the-way place, about ten miles from the fort, to shoot buffalo. Here was located, to all appearances, an ordinary spring. The Indian was some distance in advance, and going to the spring dipped a cupful of water. He had only taken one draught, when he uttered a shriek. The officers rushed to his assistance, but when they arrived at his side he was in a state of complete petrification.

When the Englishmen arrived at the fort next day they were told this story. They expressed some incredulity at first, till the officers offered to guide them to spot. The following day the expedition was accordingly made. A petrified figure, clad in a picturesque savage's costume, was found by the side of the spring, and everything tended to corroborate the story. One of the Englishmen appeared to have some doubts as to whether such a phenomenon was within the bounds of possibility, but the two surgeons who were present bombarded him with such a volley of scientific hypotheses, duly backed by jawbreaking physiological terms, that he surrendered at discretion. The upshot of the matter was that the visitors considered the figure as a great discovery. They begged it and had it boxed carefully and transported at enormous expense to New York, together with several demijohns of the fatal water, intending to ship the whole to England. In the meantime the English and American papers were full of the matter and the greatest interest was manifested to have the petrification examined by experts.

On arriving in New York the object was investigated and the slightest examination proved that the material was sandstone and the water ordinary spring water. Barnes always denied that he was concerned in any way in the hoax, but his friends say now that he was too modest to claim the credit for it.—Chicago News.

What a Deed of a Farm Includes.

The following valuable extract is from an address delivered by Judge E. H. Bonnet, of Taunton, Mass., before the state board of agriculture of that state: "Of course every one knows it conveys all the fences standing on the farm, but all might not think it also includes the fencing stuff, posts, rails etc., which had once been used in the fence but had been taken down and piled up for future use again in the same place. But new fencing material just bought and never attached to the soil would not pass. So piles of hop poles, stored away, if once on the land, have been considered a part of it; but loose boards or scaffold poles laid loosely across the beams of the barn and never fastened to it, would not be, and the seller of the farm might take them away. Standing trees,of course,also pass as part of the land; so do trees blown or cut down and still left in the woods where they fell, but not if cut and corded for sale; the wood has then become personal property. If there be any manure in the barn yard, or in a compost heap on the field, ready for immediate use, the buyer ordinarily takes that also as belonging to the farm, though it might not be so, if the owner has previously sold it to some other party, and had collected it together in a heap by itself. Growing crops also pass by a deed of a farm unless they are expressly reserved, and when it is not intended to convey those it should be so stated in the deed itself; a mere oral agreement to that effect would not be valid in law."

Vital Questions!!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, child-like refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs;such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you: "Mandrake! or Dandelion!"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill heath can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II

"Patients
Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.

Women gone nearly crazy!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of Rheumatism.

Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!

Erysipelas, salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact almost all diseases frail Nature is heir to, have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried BROWN'S IRON BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required," and when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.
